Marly Farm, located on an approximately 5-acre tract of land north of the town of New Market in Frederick County, MD and consisting of a 19th-century farm complex, is not considered eligible for listing on the National Register of Historic Places.

The farm complex consist of a 2-1/2-story brick house, two horse barns and three domestic outbuildings. The main dwelling was constructed in three principal periods, and includes a main block and two side wings. The oldest section (east wing) dates to the late 18th century, while the main block was constructed in the early 19th century and the two-story brick west wing added in the 1960s. The main block is three bays wide, with a central entry flanked by 6/6 windows and is covered with a gable roof with end chimneys. According to the inventory form, and confirmed by the photographs, the chimney shafts are rebuilt, the windows and central door are replacements and the central entry porch is a replacement. The dwelling has been greatly enlarged since its construction by the two-story wing and altered by the replacement features and materials.

According to the the inventory form, three original outbuildings are located to the rear of the residence, including a summer kitchen, a smoke house and servants quarters. The outbuildings are apparantly constructed of brick and wood, and have been "restored." The most recent assessment (July 1997) of the property did not include an examination of the outbuildings because of owner objection. Several horse barns are visible from the road, but were not accessible. Marly Farm lacks the architectural integrity to qualify for listing on the National Register under Criterion C. The Federal-era house no longer retains its integrity of materials, design, craftsmanship, and feeling.

Documentation on the property/district is presented in: MHT Inventory Form; Architectural Survey and Impact Assessment for the Proposed Royal Oaks Subdivision (July 1997)

7 MHT staff opinion was that, although marginal, property did retain sufficient integrity; complement of outbuildings is unusual

Marly Farms is a 2½ story whitewashed brick residence laid in flemish and common bond which was built in three parts, the late eighteenth century, early nineteenth century, and the 1960's. Also located on the premises directly to the rear of the residence are three restored original outbuildings, a summer kitchen, a smoke house and servants quarters.

The brick construction and Federal style lines of the main residence continue the architecture which dominates the nearby town of New Market. The existence of all three necessary outbuildings is most unusual.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Marly Farms is a two and two and a half story brick building built in three parts which faces northwest from the south side of old Route #75. The two story brick east addition which is laid in flemished bond on the north side and common bond on the remaining side is the oldest part of the house and dates to the eighteenth century. It is three bays wide on the first level on the main facade. Occupying the first two bays is a modern three bay window. Located in the remaining bays on the first and second level are modern double hung 6/6 windows with louvered shutters. To the rear of this addition is a one story brick kitchen addition with a large chimney; both structures are covered with a replaced asphalt roof and are finished by a replaced box cornice. Located to the rear of the main block of the house is a modern two story frame porch addition. A two story brick addition, built in the 1960's, is located east of the main building. The main block, which is three bays wide, is finished by a replaced asphalt roof with a stepped brick cornice and was built in the first part of the nineteenth century. Two replaced brick chimneys are located flush with the main block of the house on the east and west sides. Occupying each bay are replaced double hung 6/6 windows with louvered shutters. The main entrance, a replaced door with three light transom is located in the second bay. A pedimented frame porch is located over the entrance. The entire structure is built on a low random stone foundation. Also located on the premises directly to the rear of the residence are three restored original outbuildings, two of which are two story; a summer kitchen, a smoke house and servants quarters. The two story structures are constructed of brick on the first level and frame on the second level with a door located in the center on the north side and replaced double hung 6/6 windows on each of the remaining sides except for the south side. The house is currently used as a private residence, the outbuildings are used for storage and the remaining ground is used as a pony farm.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The brick construction and Federal style lines of the Marly Farms residence continue the architecture which dominates the nearby town of New Market. In fact the main road which runs through the center of town once passed by the front entrance to this house. The existence of all three necessary outbuildings to the rear of the house is unusual particularly considering the bricks used in their construction. Most outbuildings of the area are log, frame or stone.
